Bachelor of Science Social Sciences

The bachelor programme in social sciences at the WiSo-Faculty of the University of Cologne offers a combination of social science and economic fundamentals, with a following focus on political science or sociology and social psychology. The common element of both areas is the teaching of methodical-analytical skills in order to be able to analyse social science related problems.

Political science looks at the arrangement and rules of societal cohabitation through generally binding decisions in (sub-) national, European and international contexts (and their interdependencies) from a theoretical and empirical perspective.

Sociology is concerned with social interrelations inside and outside of communities, societies and organisations.

Perspectives

The connection between academic foundation and practical orientation as well as the possibility to set different emphases throughout their studies provide students with various career prospects in Germany and abroad. Graduates with a stronger profile in political science find possible fields of employment within political institutions (Ministry of Foreign Affairs, EU) and organisations (Parties, foundations), the media and associations on a national, European and international level as well as in the education system. Possible fields of employment for graduates with a stronger profile in sociology present in consulting and conceptual services in the area of market and social research, media and public relations departments of corporations and associations.

A good bachelor degree opens the possibility to apply for a consecutive master programme at the WiSo-Faculty, either in Political Science (Master of Arts) or Sociology (Master of Science).
